Council Approves Much of Reform Language in Police General Orders

by Matthew Arbach

After months of deliberation and debate, the Greenbelt City Council passed a 22-item police reform resolution on January 10. This resolution would modify various General Orders of the Greenbelt Police Department which dictate its day-to-day operations. With the impetus being Councilmember Colin Byrd's Greenbelt Fair and Just Policing Act, proposed in 2020, a thorough review was done by the Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) that endeavored to provide specific and the most effective alterations and correlations to the existing General Orders. In addition, the landmark April 2021 state police reform legislation stood as a powerful influence and guide.

The resolution covers policy in several areas, the major ones being: an emphasis on de-escalation, "fair, impartial and objective" conduct and a "guardian police model"; the safe and judicious use of no-knock warrants; more detailed and transparent records on police actions and the civilians involved to ensure equity; ubiquitous use of body cameras; civilian oversight in line with new state law; and the use of a specialist in order to enlist a more diverse department that reflects the city's population.

Still to be Considered

Nine items remain on a list of reforms requiring further review for later passage. They cover the following subjects: required referral to the state attorney's office on any investigations where an officer's conduct resulted in a fatality; the banning of detention of a civilian not suspected of a specific crime; the length of time for the release of body-camera footage; the banning of no-knock warrants in the city; and various

ERHS Student Wins Award For Best Micro Short Film

by Julie Rapp

Felix Hass, Greenbelt resident and 10th grader at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS), won the Best Micro Short Film award from the Taiwan International Short Film Festival in October 2021. Hass has been attending the Greenbelt Access Television (GATE) animation classes for approximately four years and with the help of his teacher, George Kochell, Hass produced his award-winning short film, Squirrel Hacker.

Hass said that Kochell, known to everyone as Mr. Geo, is a wonderful mentor. "Not only does [Mr. Geo] understand the software, but he genuinely loves both animating and teaching." Hass's film was entered into the film festival's contest on his behalf by Mr. Geo. According to Hass, Mr. Geo "really likes entering his students' films into contests and he always manages to find some who will accept them."

Hass, who is interested in computers and open-source software and is part of the robotics program at ERHS, was inspired to make this film by watching the squirrels in his backyard. The short, animated film is about a squirrel who, from a control room, sends a drone strike to a bird feeder to gain access to the seeds inside. Hass explained, "Squirrels stop at nothing to get into a bird feeder or to get any kind of food for that matter."

These short, animated films have broad appeal, Hass told the News Review. They have no words or text, so they

Photographers of Early Greenbelt Also Covered Poverty, War & More

by Deanna Dawson

Part 1 of a series

Greenbelt's construction and the early years of life in the community were well documented by photographers employed by the federal government's Resettlement Administration (RA) and the Farm Security Administration (FSA), which succeeded it. The Greenbelt photos are part of the FSA/Office of War Information (OWI) Photograph Collection, which documented American life between 1935 and 1944. After World War II, this photo collection was transferred to the Library of Congress for cataloguing and preservation; digital versions of the photos are available online at loc.gov/pictures. A search for "Greenbelt Maryland" yields 1572 results, including some more recent, color photos.

The documentary photo project was launched and headed by Roy Stryker, who was a colleague at Columbia University of Rexford Tugwell who, as head of the RA, oversaw the planning and construction of Greenbelt. Stryker initially hired 11 photographers, including Carl Mydans, Arthur Rothstein, Marion Post Wolcott, John Vachon and Russell Lee, all of whom took photos in Greenbelt. Another photographer of Greenbelt, Marjory Collins, was hired later, when the FSA photo unit had been shifted to the OWI. All six became well-known for their photojournalism and had varied and interesting careers.

This reporter was inspired to learn more about these photographers by the exhibition, The New Woman Behind the Camera, which is on view at the National Gallery of Art through January 30. The Greenbelt work of many of these photographers can be seen in the halls of the Community Center.

Grocery Shelves

I am a devoted Co-op shopper, but I go to a big chain grocery to recycle plastic bags and buy fresh turmeric. On Friday, January 14, I went to the big chain store to buy the turmeric and was surprised to find that the produce shelves were bare. I then headed to the Co-op to do my shopping for the meal I was planning for Sunday lunch with my family. The difference was both shocking and exciting. I want to give a shout-out to the people who choose the vendors for the Co-op. There are obviously definite advantages to working with vendors that cater to independent stores instead of just large chain stores. Thanks to the Co-op for the great job. I had nine different kinds of roasted vegetables for the family dinner.

More Credit Due To RUAK

The Greenbelt Black History and Culture committee was delighted to accept the 2022 Day of Service Award from our city council on Monday, January 10. However, such a recognition really belongs to an organization like RUAK (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness) and its founder, Robert Goldberg-Strassler.

Robert goes to each and every community in Greenbelt and cleans the streets and roads. He picks up trash around our communities weekly without fanfare or publicity. I see him and marvel at his dedication.

Not only has he done this "Act of Kindness" for each community, he now has many others who have taken up the mantle to keep their own neighborhoods clean.

Robert and RUAK definitely represent what "Service" in our city looks like. Thank you, Robert.

Kindness of Strangers

While doing the "bread and milk mambo" at Co-op before the latest snow storm, I couldn't reach a bottle of milk from the top shelf, as those near the front were gone and I couldn't reach the ones in back. The nearest tall stranger responded to my plea and reached for a bottle.

But, before he handed it to me, he checked the "best before" date and then pulled down another bottle to check if there was a later date. They were the same, he said, handing me a bottle with a smile (in his eyes and presumably behind his mask).

Thanks to the kind stranger for being so thoroughly helpful.

Corrections

In last week's issue, the name of the former Doctors Hospital should have been written in full as Luminis Health Doctors Community Medical Center.

Also, last week's cartoon was incorrectly attributed; it was by Michael Kusie.

The Tragedy of Macbeth

Denzel Washington and Frances McDormand star in Joel Coen's bold and fierce adaptation of the Shakespeare classic – a tale of murder, madness, ambition and wrathful cunning.

"What lingers in the mind after this version of ... Macbeth is not specific line deliveries or bravura acting moments – although the cast all acquit themselves well – but images and sounds," says Isaac Butler in Slate Magazine. "The smear of blood on Macbeth's cheek. The circling crows. The fog out of which characters emerge. The ominous strings of Carter Burwell's score. The dripping and knocking and pounding. These fragments remain, like the shards of a dream, one you're happy to have awakened from but also long to return to, so you can discover what profundities lie within."

At the Library

PGCMLS continues to offer virtual events for the public. A full schedule of upcoming programs may be accessed at pgcmls.info/events.

Covid Tests

The Greenbelt Library is no longer receiving Covid tests for free distribution. The Laurel and New Carrollton branches are the nearest libraries to still offer them. The supply of approximately 1,250 kits per day at each location is expected to be claimed before the end of the scheduled distribution time.

An announcement will be issued via pgcmls.info and @PGCMLS on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram when additional test kits become available. Check pgcmls.info/coronavirus for updates.

Library staff are maintaining a Covid-19 Testing Resources guide that can help individuals source PCR and rapid-antigen testing from various local and online providers. Visit pgcmls.info/coronavirus for more information.

Immigrant Proud

Supporting the 200,000+ immigrants and refugees who live and work in Prince George's County has long been a Library priority. This winter, the Library launches Immigrant Proud, a campaign to highlight the rich resources available to immigrants.

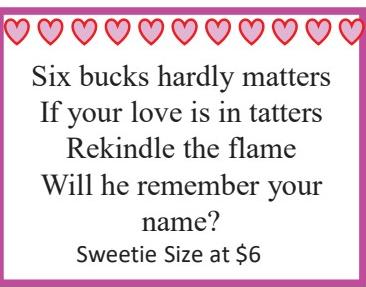

Immigrant Proud showcases books and online resources to support language learning and legal needs, free citizenship bundles to support preparation for citizenship exams, as well as programs like English classes for English language learners, Kids Achieve Club virtual tutoring for students in grades 1 to 4, Leamos literacy classes for Spanish speakers, citizenship study groups and language conversation clubs for informal practice. An overview of resources is available at the Library's new Immigrant Proud webpage (pgcmls.info/immigrantproud) and on displays in branch libraries.

U.S. Passports

The Greenbelt Library is a U.S. Passport Acceptance Facility. Applications are accepted by appointment; schedule a 30-minute appointment by calling 240-455-5451 or visiting pgcmls.info/passport-services. Families with multiple applicants must schedule separate appointments for each person.

GHI Seeks Member Input in Survey

The Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) Transition Task Force is seeking members' help to inform GHI's preparation for a general manager leadership transition. Eldon Ralph became general manager in 2011 and has indicated that he has begun to think about retirement.

The task force has prepared a short survey that asks members what they would like to see changed at GHI, what should stay the same and what are key attributes of the next general manager. This feedback will help the board of directors understand members' wishes for the leadership transition and inform the board of what types of candidates to look for and ultimately select.

In addition to helping inform the transition and to encourage and thank members for participating, six survey respondents will be randomly chosen to receive $50 gift certificates to the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket. To be entered into the raffle, name and address must be entered where indicated in the survey. To foster prompt participation, two of the six gift certificates will be awarded to members who have responded by Friday, January 21.

The link to the Google survey form is: surveymonkey.com/r/WDF7LKM. Paper copies of the survey are available from the GHI administration office during usual business hours. Completed surveys may be returned to the office. Members are requested to complete online surveys and return paper surveys to the office before Wednesday, February 9. Complete only one survey per member.

On Saturday January 1, 2022, William (Bill) F. Stoddard, Jr. died peacefully at home.

He was born on July 13, 1948, and raised in Brookland in northeast D.C. He loved to tell stories of growing up in the District, playing ball at Turkey Thicket and going to Washington Senators games. He was a proud Washingtonian.

Bill joined the phone company at a young age and had an almost 40-year career. He prided himself on his career, his integrity and the legacy he left behind. During his proud career he made many lifelong friends and had many stories to tell.

Bill and Sharon were married 42 years. They chose to settle and raise their children in Greenbelt. Bill loved the community of Greenbelt, coaching CYO baseball for St. Hugh's and volunteering on the board for the Greenbelt Credit Union and the Greenbelt Co-op.

The true joy of Bill's life, especially in his final years, were his grandchildren. It was not uncommon to find one or all of them in the room with him watching Looney Tunes or other cartoons. Bill was a beloved friend and family member and will be missed.

He is survived by his wife, Sharon (Katzenberger); daughter Theresa (Beth) (Eric Schindler); son James (Jim) (Amy Gignac Stoddard); and his three grandchildren, Emma, Kenzie and Cayden. Bill was a well-loved uncle, cousin, godfather, coach and friend.

In Memoriam

Eulogy for Mike Wilson

David Michael (Mike) Wilson died on Sunday, January 9. The following is a eulogy read at his memorial service on Thursday, January 13.

Damn, Damn Alzheimer's

A horrible disease that robs a brilliant mind and erases memories at the young age of 63. We, all of us, family, friends and our firehouse, have years and years of wonderful, fun memories of Mike Wilson.

Back in the day when Greenbelt had a winning, championship softball team, Mike was the star shortstop who made unbelievable catches and could smack the daylights out of a baseball. He gave us years of great memories during those games.

Mike became a member of Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department on August 6, 1975, and was an important part of our live-in crew. Mike had the honor of a life membership, a title that was so worthy of the man he was. Mike was a true leader, an officer, a driver of apparatus and he took new, young members under his broad wings and guided them in becoming great firefighters.

Mike was a gentle, giant of a man; always kind, soft spoken, never heard him raise his voice, always there to guide and help those who needed him, and a hero of a firefighter. They just don't make them like that anymore.

I looked up two words in "my dictionary" and this is what I found. I am sure after you hear the description you will find them too! A leader's leader, a fighter's fighter, a gentleman's gentle man, a warrior's warrior, a firefighter's firefighter, a hero's hero, and a ballplayer's ballplayer. Yes, we are right – those two words describe Mike Wilson to a T.

Mike met and married the absolute love of his life, his soulmate, his everything, Beth. They were married for 29 years and have two beautiful daughters, Kate and Kylie. In many of our conversations, Mike would puff up with love and pride when we would talk about his girls. He absolutely adored and idolized the two of them. They were his world, his life.

Perhaps the next time we are at our firehouse, may we stop and take a moment to listen to the walls talk to us of fun and crazy times. To hear the laughter of great friends such as Carl, Billy, Brian Rudy, Brian Tayman, Jay, Chris Fleshman, Matt Palmerston, Tick, Dicky, Pat O'Hagan, Chris Ransom, Tommy, Randy, Stephan, Eddie Joe, Jason, Mike Burt, John Michael, Cami, Bobby Angel, Dave, Matt Weber, Ronnie Walter, just to name a few as there are many more.

It has not been an easy journey for Beth, the girls and their family. The days were long and the nights even longer. Beth was the tower of strength, holding it together, yet always fighting back tears on the inside. Her gentleness, kindness and love always shown through taking care of Mike and those beautiful, loving acts she passed down to her daughters as they cared for and loved their dad during his courageous battle with Alzheimer's. So, yes, damn, damn Alzheimer's. We will miss Mike's smile, silly dance moves, his kindness, his sense of humor and his leadership. We will miss him beyond words. So, as we leave here tonight, say a prayer for Beth, Kate, Kylie and all of the family. They will need us to lean on and to help them put one foot in front of the other. As I shared with Beth the other day, we are here for you, we stand beside you, behind you and with you in the days, weeks and years ahead.

Thank you for sharing with all of us a wonderful, wonderful, kind and giant of a man that we all love. Until we meet again, Mike, damn, damn Alzheimer's. Rest easy; we have it from here.

- Kathy Reynolds

Our condolences to the family and friends of Mike Wilson, who died on January 9. Their loss is also a great loss to the community as Mr. Wilson was a life member of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department.

Condolences also for the family and friends of William Stoddard, who died January 1.

Sympathy as well for the family and friends of Patrick O'Brien, who died January 17.

Congratulations to Felix Hass, Eleanor Roosevelt High School sophomore, on winning the Best Micro Short Film Award at the Taiwan International Film Festival for his animated film Squirrel Hacker, inspired by local wildlife.

The Exquisite Hour Concert January 29

Mowatt United Methodist Church, 40 Ridge Road, will host The Exquisite Hour Concert on Saturday, January 29 at 7 p.m. in the church sanctuary. Jie Fang Goh, a Malaysian-Chinese collaborative pianist, and Öznur Tültüoğlu, a first-generation Turkish-American soprano, will present The Exquisite Hour, a themed vocal and piano recital featuring masterpieces from composers from Europe and the United States that are inspired by, related to, or evocative of the moon. Encompassing a kaleidoscopic array of musical styles and poetry from the Romantic period up until the present day, the program will include songs by Bernstein, Brahms, Schumann, Debussy, Poldowski, Weill and more. This collection of little night-time stories, borne out of the deepest desires and wildest fantasies of these composers and poets, are filled with countless exquisite moments, promising an evening worth remembering.

This is a free-admission event. All age groups are welcome to attend and protective measures such as masking, social distancing and sanitization will be taken to ensure everyone's safety. Donations are appreciated and all proceeds will go toward supporting the Mowatt church. For more information about the concert, contact the office at 301-474-9410.

County Sheriff Carr Informs Council on Eviction Policies

by Matthew Arbach

Lt. Colonel John Carr, assistant sheriff and chief of the Bureau of Field Operations for Prince George's County, made a presentation to the Greenbelt City Council on Monday, January 10 on the subject of evictions, which he oversees and is the purview of his department. Carr emphasized his commitment to execute his charge with utmost empathy and that his organization strives – through outreach, administrative efforts and allocation of relief funds – to avoid the unfortunate final step of evicting families from their homes in this difficult time. Carr laid out the steps involved in an eviction and the circumstances by which one can be delayed or cancelled.

Carr said that along with a rise in emergency mental health and domestic violence calls, his department has been dealing chiefly with tenant/landlord issues during the pandemic.

His department endeavors to resolve as many evictions as possible administratively by connecting tenants with assistance programs and working with property owners to find alternatives. He said that some local municipalities have also made efforts to forestall evictions by working with property owners.

County Statistics

Carr laid out some eviction statistics for 2021 for the county. The district court issued 2,163 district writs, of which 1,992 were cancelled through administrative means, leaving 750 evictions that were carried out. While he said that this number was still large, he made a comparison to pre-pandemic numbers, when there were over 6,000 writs issued, of which 3,000 were disposed of, the remainder of which resulted in evictions or the tenants moving out. He credited the difference to the influx of unprecedented Covid-related rental assistance programs like the county's Emergency Rental Assistance Program (ERAP) and partnerships with organizations like CASA.

According to Carr, Franklin Park has the "lion's share" of evictions in Greenbelt. He stated that, in Franklin Park and Greenbelt Station, there were 78 current eviction writs issued, with 42 being worked on administratively, adding that most of the evictions in Franklin Park are dealt with in this manner.

Postpone or Stop

While nothing can be done to stop an eviction once it has

of previously submitted applications online.

Considerations

A small percentage of evictions are in the category of "tenant holding over," where a property owner has not renewed a lease and the tenant continues to stay in the residence.

Carr stressed the need for county residents to be wary of intimidation and misinformation from property owners who attempt to force a tenant out on their own volition, employing tactics like changing locks. Strictly speaking, a legal eviction is a court-ordered action that is administered by the County Sheriff's Office. In some cases, Carr has seen tenants who vacate the premises even before the sheriff appears on the scene.

Carr said that the courts provide Spanish translation and aids to the language impaired on writ notices and listings of assistance resources.

Mayor Emmett Jordan expressed the council's feelings for the difficult job that Carr and his department are charged with, noting his "heart and compassion," and praising the alliance of communication that was being practiced.

City Role

A municipality like Greenbelt has no power to intercede in an eviction. Said Carr, the Sheriff's Office is "the arm of the court," and has to act in an impartial manner to carry them out if no other alternatives manifest. Greenbelt can help in the area of rental assistance, which exists under groups like Greenbelt CARES.

Applications Open for Green Ridge House Senior Facility

by Cathie Meetre

At 9 a.m. on Tuesday, January 18, Green Ridge House opened its applications for the coming year.

By 8:45 a.m. there were eight potential residents signed in and seated comfortably in the lobby and lounge waiting for the process to begin. The facility, owned by the city and operated under a contract, requests that potential residents complete an application in person during its application period. The form includes information for determining eligibility for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Section 8 Housing Choice Voucher Program that keeps rents to a percentage of the individual's income. Although originally intended as a facility for the city's older or disabled residents, its eligibility for HUD funding means that non-residents are also welcomed.

Those waiting in the lobby appeared cheerful and excited by the prospect of living at Green Ridge House and itching to fill in the form. One had come from Waldorf to apply and another lived in the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. apartments nearby. The earliest arrival had been there since about 6:30 a.m. They pronounced themselves ready to move at a moment's notice – one of the eligibility requirements is based on the ability of the individual to move in quickly once an apartment is open. The applications were given out at 9 a.m. in order of arrival, and one lady fervently hoped that she could fill in her form fast enough to stay in the running.

Vaccine Data Misinterpreted In Seeking Cause and Effect

by Cathie Meetre

The Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting system (VAERS, vaers.hhs.gov) is a database started in 1990 and maintained by the federal Department of Health and Human Services. Medical professionals report on deaths or other reactions in those who have been vaccinated – regardless of whether a connection between the vaccination and the death is suspected. VAERS includes data for familiar shots like polio, flu and now Covid-19, as well as many rarely given in the U.S., like Ebola or anthrax. VAERS is a bit daunting to use – it's designed for researchers trained in statistical analysis and should be approached with caution.

What's in VAERS?

VAERS records (among other things) how many people have died in the U.S. within two weeks of receiving a vaccination. Those who don't understand statistics sometimes incorrectly use this number to say that thousands of people have died BECAUSE they got vaccinated. This makes people think, wrongly, that getting the vaccine is more dangerous than getting Covid.

Cause and Effect

If two things both happen to a group of people, it does NOT automatically mean one causes the other. Suppose all the people who died within two weeks of taking an aspirin were counted, the number would be huge – but nobody assumes aspirin killed all those people because it's the devil we know (despite aspirin's potential dangers). Perhaps the dead person took aspirin for a headache that was the precursor to a stroke or maybe for a toothache but died of a heart attack. There's no way to know from these numbers.

Connecting the Dots

The VAERS numbers allow for statistical analyses that help us figure out if there is a connection. The step-by-step process (without getting too technical) looks like this:

1. Count those who died within two weeks after being vaccinated.
2. Group them by age, gender, ethnicity, etc. – “slice and dice” on multiple characteristics.
3. Record the assigned causes of death (e.g. heart attack, cancer, stroke, diabetes or whatever).
4. Repeat steps 1 through 3 for a large group of similar people who died but didn't get the vaccine within the two weeks prior. This is the control group.
5. Compare the causes of death for the two groups. Look overall and in combinations of age, gender, ethnicity, etc.

Then comes the big question: Do any causes of death seen in the two-week-vaccinated people occur more often than with the control group, and is that enough times to be sure? If people died of something in the two-week vaccinated group and fewer died of the same thing in the other group – Bingo! Then there's a possible cause-and-effect relationship. As the groups of people in the data get larger and the pattern remains, the results become more and more certain.

Putting It Together

This statistical process is how the link between the J&J vaccine and blood clots was found. Of thousands of people who died within two weeks after a J&J shot, several died from a rare blood clot – mostly overweight women in their 40s and 50s. The disease was so rare that it would be unlikely to kill even one person in the vaccinated group, much less several, unless there was a connection. This signaled a cause-and-effect relationship – the J&J vaccine was associated with the blood clots. There were no other similar patterns – the rest of the people in both groups died from what would be expected in about the same proportions – heart disease, cancer, stroke – the usual suspects.

More Data Helps

A picture that is fuzzy with 10,000 people gets much clearer with 100,000. With over 550 million vaccinations so far in the United States and billions worldwide, there have been no other cause and effect links found between any of the vaccines and a cause of death. The most serious other related concern was a slightly increased incidence of myocarditis and pericarditis, most often in young males. These inflammations were generally mild and rapidly went away with treatment.

The evidence shows the vaccination is safe – but its effectiveness diminishes with time, and the more slowly the world is vaccinated the greater the chance for a new and much more dangerous variant to emerge.

Covid Cases: 20770 Zip Code

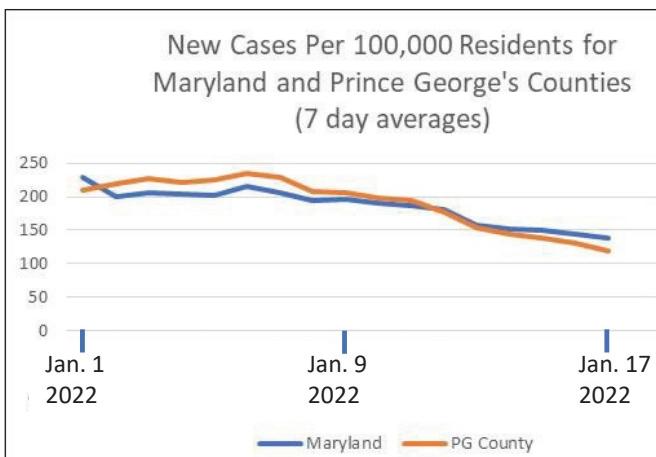

The data from the county and the state for the last few weeks seems to indicate a reduction in the number of new cases and some relief for hospital beds. Data released Tuesday, January 18 shows that new cases per day have fallen to approximately half the number experienced on the peak days around the New Year and the trend is downwards. But compared to the low point last summer, there are still many new cases and it's no time to relax vigilance. County-wide, availability of hospital beds is back in the medium range with about 40 to 49 percent of beds available, having dropped briefly below 40 percent. But community transmission remains substantial though hospital bed use is somewhat down from the county peak of 364 – though still above 300.

News from zip code 20770 also shows a sustained descent in new case numbers that started around the New Year and continues to gradually go down – exhibiting the same pattern as the county and the state.

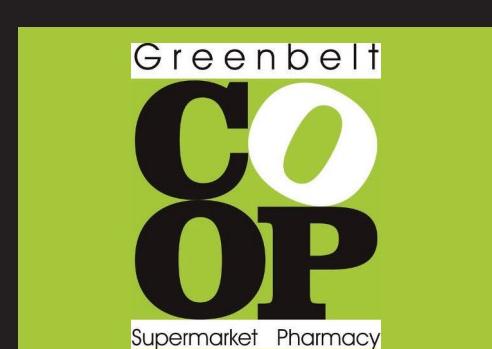

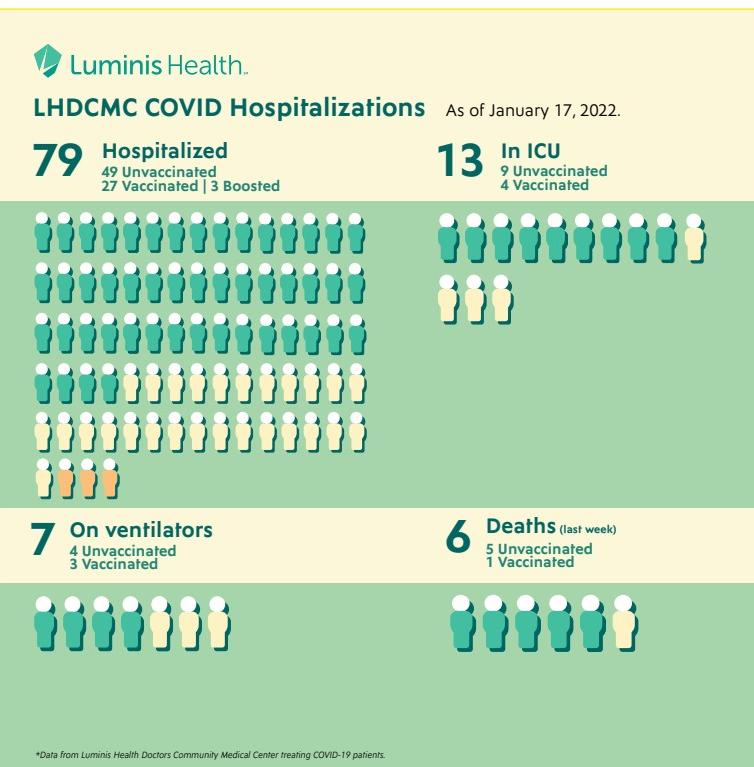

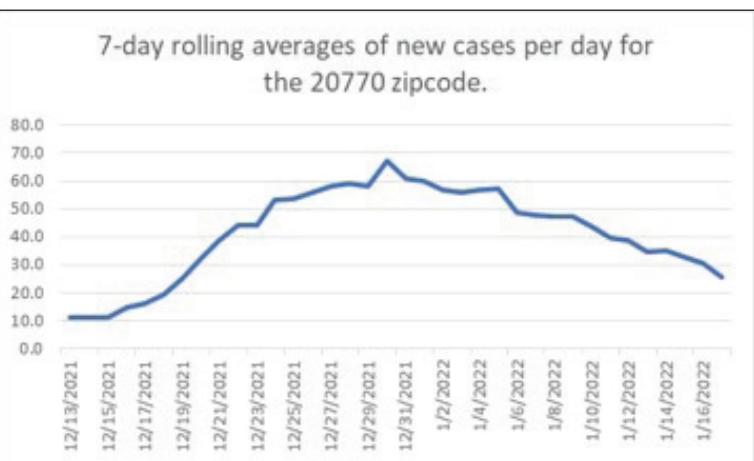

News from Luminis Health Doctors Community Medical Center (LHDCMC) remains similar to last week as the new cases from the peaks at the New Year move through their illness. If anything, it is even more obvious that the unvaccinated outnumber the fully vaccinated many-fold. If all the unvaccinated or partially vaccinated patients had been fully vaccinated (including the booster), the number of hospital beds filled by Covid patients would be perhaps 10 to 12 instead of 99.

There are zero fully vaccinated individuals in the ICU, on ventilators or who died during the week this data covers and out of 99 patients altogether, only four fully-vaccinated patients are hospitalized in the regular wards.

Thanks to LHDCMC for providing this graphic at the News Review's request.

Census Official Addresses The Greenbelt Golden Agers

by Mary Moien

On January 12, Nicholas A. Jones, U.S. Census Bureau, spoke with members of the Greenbelt Golden Agers. Jones is director/senior advisor for race/ethnicity research and outreach at Census. The main emphasis in his presentation was on the 2020 Census, especially related to his expertise in the areas of race and ethnicity. Jones described how the collection of race data has shifted since the very first census in 1790 until the most recent in 2020. In the most recent census, there was the most detailed collection ever of multiple races. There was a lively discussion between Jones and the Golden Age participants.

Jones compared many map charts showing the change in race and ethnicity across the U.S. between the 2010 and 2020 Censuses. He described how, for many states, the number of people who indicated being of a single race is decreasing and the number who indicate multiple races is increasing. In 2020, Maryland was one of the top five states with the most diverse populations. The western part of the state had the least diversity and the mid-state and eastern counties had significantly more diversity. Jones described how diversity can be shown by randomly picking two people in a locale and seeing how likely it is that they will be of two races or two ethnicities. In the 2010 Census, Montgomery and Charles counties were the most diverse in Maryland. In

Nicholas A. Jones, Census Bureau Official, addresses the Golden Age Club.

2020, Montgomery and Howard counties were the most diverse.

Multiracial Data

In the 2020 Census, respondents were able to provide multiracial data in a more detailed way for the first time. This led to significant shifts in how the population was reported. The white population remained the largest racial group in the U.S., with 204 million people identifying as white alone. Another 30 million people identified as white in combination with another group. The white alone group actually decreased by 8.6 percent from 2010 to 2020.

During the same decade, the multiracial population increased significantly. There were 9 million people who chose that race group in 2010, compared with almost 34 million in 2020, a 276-percent increase.

Greenbelt Statistics

Jones provided some basic statistics on Greenbelt. Between 2010 and 2020, Greenbelt's total population grew from 23,068 to 24,921, an increase of 8 percent. The Hispanic population grew by 30 percent to 4,280 people. The Not Hispanic population grew by 4 percent to 20,642. Among the Not Hispanic, the largest race groups in 2020 were Black or African American alone with 11,897 people; White alone with 5,176 people; Asian alone with 2,323 people and Two or More Races with 996 people.

Greenbelt Connection

It was no surprise to the Golden Agers present that Nicholas Jones is the son of Greenbelt's own John Henry Jones and the late Elaine Jones. Jones grew up in Greenbelt and is well-known by many who participated in the discussion.

Past Census Data

When people complete the Census forms, they are promised that their individual data will not become public for a certain period of time. But genealogists are always interested in detailed data, so it was determined that detailed data could be released 72 years after the Census year. Jones announced that the 1950 detailed Census data will be released this spring.

issues around stop and frisk, including the banning of any unconstitutional usage and information gathering on those for whom it has been used. Council is keen on reaching final deliberations on these standing issues in the near future.

Amendments Withdrawn

Byrd introduced two amendments, both of which were debated and later withdrawn for separate reasons. The first sought to make the public release of disciplinary and internal affairs records of the department, even those found baseless, "releasable" (a stronger term), as mandated by Anton's Law, a recent statute that amended the Maryland Public Information Act (MPIA). Byrd stated his misgiving with the use of the word "comply" (in reference to Anton's Law) in the resolution's corresponding General Order, citing the term's ambiguous interpretation by the county Police Department, who he said have a history of not making these records available on a regular basis. When told by Captain Timothy White that the Greenbelt Police Department is already performing a policy in line with Byrd's wishes, including making past documents available, he withdrew the amendment as unnecessary.

The second amendment concerned establishing a term of 10 working days to satisfy the request for a release of body-camera footage. The department has determined that this is a performable timeframe. Yet, a sticking point arose when Chief Richard Bowers said that attorneys at times will use MPIA avenues to gather footage for cases like auto crashes. Normally in cases like these, attorneys would employ a subpoena, which has a 30-day time period. White and Bowers were concerned that setting a 10-day general timeframe would apply to these cases as well if sought through MPIA. So, a debate arose over whether more tiered parameters need to be applied, with the 10-day mandate reserved for more urgent situations. While there was reluctance over leaving this unsettled and some frustration from Byrd for the unexpected revelation of the problem (White responded that this was a more recent problem, largely from the closing of the courts due to inclement weather), it was deemed wise to revisit this item later, with Byrd withdrawing the amendment.

Reform Takes Time

Faced with the potential for another delayed vote, resident Lois Rosado expressed consternation with council for the onerous length of time it has taken to adopt these reforms, citing that council risked becoming "a laughingstock" in the area. Councilmember Judith Davis reassured her that it was only the still-to-be-determined items that would require later voting. Mayor Emmett Jordan stressed the historic and important nature of these reforms, saying that they required deliberation to avoid "unintended consequences."

In the end, the current resolution was passed unanimously. PSAC member Peggy Higgins praised council for their persistence in seeing this through, and summed up the general feeling that "there was more to be done."

Mayor, Councilmembers Are Involved on a Wider Stage

Greenbelt Mayor Emmett V. Jordan was elected to the National League of Cities (NLC) Board of Directors by NLC's membership at the 2021 virtual City Summit. Jordan was elected to a two-year term and will provide strategic direction and guidance for NLC's federal advocacy, governance and membership activities. NLC is the largest and most representative organization for cities, their elected leaders and municipal staff. It advocates for city priorities in Washington by building strong federal-local partnerships.

"I'm thankful for the opportunity to serve on the NLC Board of Directors. To work with other like-minded people who have the same goal in mind is quintessential. I'm excited to use my voice and platform to assist our cities, towns and villages receive the support they deserve. This is going to be a great term and I look forward to meeting and working with everyone," said Jordan.

As a member of the board, Jordan will meet in March, June and November to guide NLC's strategic direction. Board members are selected by a 15-member nominating committee and are confirmed by a vote from NLC's membership at the organization's annual business meeting.

"The NLC Board of Directors serves an important role in determining the direction of our organization's priorities and policies," said NLC President Mayor

Natural Resources Committee - Councilmember Judith Davis

- Public Safety and Crime Prevention Committee - Councilmember Silke Pope.

In addition, Pope is a member of the Small Cities Council. Councilmember Ric Gordon has joined two constituency groups: the National Black Caucus of Local Elected Officials and Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender Local Officials.

to Washington to work for the RA in 1935. He took dozens of photos in Greenbelt when the new town was being constructed. During that same time period, Mydans also traveled throughout New England and the southern U.S., documenting the conditions of American workers during the Great Depression.

In 1936, Mydans joined Life magazine as one of its earliest staff photographers and worked for Life until it folded in 1972. He traveled extensively during World War II, photographing life and death throughout Europe and Asia. Mydans and his wife were captured in the Philippines by the invading Japanese forces and held for nearly a year in Manila and for another year in Shanghai, China, before being released in a prisoner-of-war exchange in December 1943. Surprisingly, Mydans was then sent back to Europe to cover battles in France and Italy and he went back to the Philippines to cover General Douglas MacArthur's famous return in 1945. He also photographed the signing of Japan's surrender aboard the USS Missouri. After the war, Mydans and his wife headed Time-Life's Tokyo bureau for a few years and covered the Korean War. He died in 2004 at age 97.

Arthur Rothstein

Arthur Rothstein had been a student of Stryker at Columbia University and was hired by him to set up the darkroom for the Photo Unit when it was part of the RA. He was the first photographer sent out by Stryker to photograph rural and small-town America. One of his first assignments was to photograph farm families that were displaced when Shenandoah National Park was created. Rothstein also took photos of families and conditions in the Dust Bowl, cattle ranches in Montana and Black tenant families in Gee's Bend, Alabama. Most of his Greenbelt photos were taken after construction was finished and while the new residents were settling in. Noteworthy are Rothstein's photos taken in January 1938 of the buildings around town and in April 1939 of children in the school (now the Community Center).

Rothstein became a staff photographer for Look magazine in 1940 but left to become a photographer in the Army Signal Corps, where he covered the China-Burma-India theatre. He remained in China following his discharge from the Army in 1945, working as chief photographer for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. He rejoined Look as director of photo tography in 1947 and worked for the magazine until it ceased publication in 1971. He then joined Parade magazine, working there until his death in 1985 at age 70.

Marion Post Wolcott

Marion Post Wolcott took over 250 photos of Greenbelt scenes and people in September 1938 and the summer of 1939. She trained as a teacher but then went to Europe to join her sister who was studying with Viennese photographer Trude Fleischmann. Fleischmann saw some of Marion's photos and encouraged her to get serious about photography. The Post sisters returned to the U.S. after witnessing Nazi attacks on Vienna's Jewish population and Marion became involved in the anti-fascist movement while continuing her photography. A colleague at the New York Photo League showed Stryker a portfolio of Marion's photos and Stryker immediately hired her as an FSA photographer, where she explored the political aspects of poverty and deprivation. She resigned from FSA in 1942, shortly after her marriage, and then focused on raising a family.

She became active again in photography in the 1970s, when scholars got interested in her work. Her photos have been collected by major museums, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Smithsonian. One of her photos is included in the exhibition The New Woman Behind the Camera, currently on view at the National Gallery of Art.

Mishkan Torah Synagogue Celebrates Tu B'Shvat, Trees

by Karen L. Knee

Jodi Cohen (in blue hat and scarf) teaches participants about local trees and plants on the Greenbelt Lake peninsula.

On Sunday, January 16, about 25 members of Mishkan Torah Synagogue, along with friends and family members, gathered to celebrate the Jewish holiday of Tu B'Shvat, the New Year of the Trees. Despite the cold weather and the winter storm approaching from the south, participants were happy to get outside, spend time together in person and appreciate local plants and trees.

Religious Committee Co-chair Sue Zuk organized the event. She prepared bags containing different kinds of fruits and nuts that symbolize the concepts of action, formation, thought and spirit in Jewish mysticism, or Kabbalah. She also created bingo sheets with various items for people to find as they embarked upon a short nature walk to Greenbelt Lake. Karp Family Hebrew School parent and former environmental educator Jodi Cohen led the nature walk, pointing out a pawpaw tree, spicebush, holly and other notable vegetation along the way.

In Israel, the timing of Tu B'Shvat is based on the agricultural cycle, and the holiday marks the beginning of the tree-planting season. Here, in Maryland, it falls in the middle of winter. Nonetheless, signs of life were visible to those who looked carefully – for example, the silver, velvety buds that had already begun forming on the magnolia trees alongside the tennis courts.

Mishkan Torah offers a variety of Jewish holiday-themed programs and social events throughout the year. To learn more, email membership@mishkantorah.org or visit mishkantorah.org.

Martin Luther King Day

Covid vaccines, boosters and free meals were used to celebrate Martin Luther King, Jr. Day at Beltway Plaza on January 17. The event, which was co-sponsored by At-Large County Council-member Mel Franklin and DJ Flexx, included a visit from Chair of the Maryland House Black Caucus Delegate Darryl Barnes of District 25. Pictured, from left, are: Councilmember Ric Gordon, Mayor Emmett Jordan, Kimmie Jolly, Bonita Curtis and Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen Shaymar Higgs.

City Opens County's First Oyster Shell Recycling Site

by Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll

A female oyster at an aquaculture facility on Gwynn's Island, Virginia

The City of Greenbelt Department of Public Works is now offering the first public drop-off site for oyster shell recycling in Prince George's County. The site is located at the Buddy Attick Park Residential Recycling Center. Residents can take their empty oyster shells to the drop-off location to be collected by the Oyster Shell Recovery Partnership and taken to the University of Maryland, Horn Point Oyster Hatchery. The shells are then aged, washed and used as anchor sites for oyster larvae, called spat. Each recycled oyster shell can host up to 10 spat. The shells with anchored spat are then planted in oyster reefs in the Chesapeake Bay, supporting the local oyster populations and the seafood markets that sell them.

Oysters are a keystone species in the bay ecosystem and are vital to the local seafood economy. Oysters are filter feeders, acting like vacuums to clean organic and inorganic material in the water. This ecosystem service creates cleaner water that benefits other species in the bay. In fact, one oyster can filter up to 50 gallons of water per day and it is estimated that the pre-Colonial population of oysters could filter the entire volume of the Chesapeake Bay in just about four days.

Oyster reefs support a diversity of bay-dwelling species by providing spawning habitat and shelter. Species such as barnacles, mussels and anemones all need to attach to a hard surface to grow, while other species such as oyster gobies and blennies use dead oyster shells on which to lay their eggs. The presence of these species and other bay residents attracts and supports larger species, contributing to the $600 million seafood industry in Maryland that supports local watermen.

Years of overharvesting, disease and habitat loss and degradation have created an uphill battle for oysters to truly recover in the Chesapeake Bay. To help support the local economy and the oyster population at the same time, eat oysters and recycle their shells.

For more information visit oysterrecovery.org and hpl.umces.edu, as well as greenbeltdmd.gov/government/public-works/trash-recycling/oyster-shell-recycling.
